

One problem that came up repeatedly when we were exploring our dataset is that there were too many classes for us to create a single visualization. We would have to find a way to filter the data if we wanted it to be easy to view. Accordingly, we designed our visualization to have 26 hyper-links: one for each letter in the alphabet. The page instructs viewers to select the first letter of the department they're interested in.